COMMERCIAL AIRLINES SHIFTING

Saras rescue is specialised in transferring patients by commercial airlines. Commercial-Airline Air-Medical-Stretcher Service is most needed when a patient becomes ill in a foreign country, or a foreigner needs to be medically air repatriated. Therefore, all medical air repatriation transports are only available on international flights via a few selected international airline carriers. This worldwide airline stretcher option is extremely economical compared to Private Air Ambulance. The allotted section is dedicated for the accommodation of the patient on a stretcher accompanied by our air ambulance professionals Air Medical Staff with Flight Medical Equipment. The patient gets isolated via a semi-private setting from the rest of the passengers on board the airplane. In addition, we work out all the logistics with the global airline carrier to clear the patient for this medical flight, and provide all necessary documentation and equipment needed and required for this medical international flight as safe and smooth as possible.

In addition, we also have a number of ambulance crews who are assigned dedicated vehicles and routes to ensure that regular patients benefit from the same staff who understand their individual needs, which in turn builds comfort and confidence to the patient. We also supply paramedics, nurses and doctors on the ambulance – when required.

Our aero-medical trained team of professionals follow strict medical transportation protocols, with the highest priority given towards addressing the patients condition and establishing their comfort.

Our planes are equipped with state of the art equipment with all the details of the patient already passed on to the ground staff, who constantly monitor the patients' condition. This ensures that the fully functional ICU unit with our highly trained staff, along with a personally assigned transport specialist, are able to provide the optimum care and attention that the patient deserves. We conduct regular inspection of our planes and constantly upgrade our already high end medical equipment.
